THE OPEN SEASON FOR DEER HUNTING

Deer may be killed in all counties where they exist, in both the upper and lower peninsulas of Michigan this year. An order, approved by the Public Domain Commission, directs State Game Commissioner John Baird to announce the open season for killing of deer as November 13 to November 22, both dates inclusive, curtailing the period of lawful hunting to ten days. The order of the Commission is authorized by Act 9 of the Public Acts, 1917.

Who remembers what women did with their spare time before there were any movies?

One reason why adults do not wish children to have opinions is because these opinions are so often right and their own wrong.

The way a girl dresses is nobody's business, but we always suspect the size or the shape or the cleanliness of the ears under hair puffs.

LATE POTATO BLIGHT FOUND IN MICHIGAN

Late blight of potatoes, a disease which is expected to cause only slight loss to the crop, but which demands careful attention at digging time in order to avoid infection which would lead to rotting of the tubers in storage, has been discovered by agents of the Michigan Agricultural College in Wayne and Oakland counties. Outbreaks may occur in other counties of the Southeastern part of the State.

"Sprayed fields will not show serious injury from Late Blight," says Dr. G. H. Coons, plant pathologist of M. A. C. "but some loss may be experienced in the unsprayed fields in sections having heaviest rainfall this year. The amount and distribution of rainfall is decisive in determining the amount of blight. With fairly abundant rain in July and August, the vines will make a heavy growth and become susceptible.

It is advisable to wait two weeks after the tops are dead before digging the potato crop where blighting of the tops has occurred and soil conditions permit. Potatoes dug while the tops are green when late blight is present are likely to become infected with spores from the blighted leaves. Such potatoes rot badly in storage. If the potatoes are left in the ground until the tops have withered and dried completely, and then are sorted carefully at digging time, they will keep satisfactorily in a cool and well ventilated storage cellar.

"In general the Late Blight outbreak has begun too late to affect the crop seriously. It will not be general in any of the counties, but will cause loss here and there. Observance of directions as to handling the tubers will insure a crop safe for marketing or storage."

SOUTH CLAMORING FOR PROTECTION

Washington, Sept. 21.—(Special correspondence)—The amazing spectacle of Argentine corn being sold in the markets of Illinois has been duplicated by the sale of Chinese peanuts in the great peanut producing section of the South. After the passage of the Wilson-Underwood tariff law in 1913, Argentine farmers were able to ship their corn, produced on cheap land by cheap labor, and sell it in direct competition with the corn produced in America. Today, with the same tariff law on the statute books, the peanut producers of the South find Chinese peanuts poured into the peanut oil mills of their territory. A Jacksonville, Florida, dispatch reports that—

"One thousand tons of Chinese peanuts are being discharged at the municipal terminals by the Japanese steamer Choyo Maru. The nuts will be crushed by the peanut mill at Madison, Florida. This is said to be the first of many such shipments if the experiment proves satisfactory."

The peanut mill is, of course, the cheapest market. Already thousands of tons of peanuts have found their way to the American market for the higher price that can be obtained for the nut shelled or unshelled for consumption in the whole state. Shipments to the mills indicate that the Chinese producers have an immense supply seeking a market and that they are ready to compete with the American producer to the latter's ruin.

The conditions which make it possible to ship Chinese peanuts to the peanut producing section of the United States may be readily understood when it is known that wages of farm laborers in China are about three to five cents a day. Chinese workmen living chiefly on a small quantity of rice, living in hovels and changing their clothing only when the garments drop off their bodies in rags. It is with such labor the Democratic party has thrown the American workman into competition. The interest of the South in the subject is pointed out by the Manufacturer's Record, a paper which caters particularly to Southern interests. That paper says:

"The whole country is now confronted with the question as to whether it will be flooded with the agricultural and industrial products of the Orient, produced at wages which would destroy the earning capacity of American farmers and mechanics, or whether we shall protect ourselves against such disasters.

"At last the farmers of the South are beginning to realize what it means to them. Misled by unwise politicians, fed on economic theories, the people of the South were for years made to believe that a protective tariff did not interest them, but that they should fight for free trade, mainly because in former years it had been the custom of these politicians to train the South to believe that anything the North and West wanted was a thing the South should oppose. But the South is fast coming to realize that it needs protection more than any other section." Yet, in the face of these facts, the latest Democratic platform contains a plain declaration of steadfast adherence to the traditional policy of the party—that a protective tariff is unconstitutional.

In view of the changed view in the South, and Mr. Cox's unqualified endorsement of the platform, it is not surprising that there is strong indication of revulsion among Southern Democrats. Many members of the party will stay home on election day, say the reports from that section of the country but many more will have the courage to vote their real convictions, and support the Republican candidates, with the program of "America First" in economics and in international relations.

PAID FOR HIS PAPER AND THE COSTS

(Huntingdon (Pa.) News.)

The court of common pleas of Lawrence county recently decided a small case involving $5.40 in the interest of a newspaper published in that county. It appears from the evidence that a carrier delivered a paper for a year and several months to one Henry Seiber, who refused to pay for it because he hadn't ordered it. Seiber accepted the paper and the family read it. The court in instructing the jury said among other things that Seiber in not refusing the paper was party to an implied contract to pay for what he got on the same theory if a merchant delivers groceries to the wrong house and the person who got the groceries used them, was liable, or a man called to a day's work in a garden and gets in the wrong lot and works a day with the knowledge of the owner of the lot, the man who received the benefit of that man's work was under obligations to pay for the labor, or the man who cleans another's pavement while the owner looks on without ordering the workman to stop, there is an implied contract to pay for that man's service. The same principle of law holds good, said the judge, when you receive a paper through the mails. In accepting the paper there is an implied contract to pay for it.

The decision by the court in directing a verdict against the man who read the paper in favor of the publisher is not new, as the question has been decided by many of the lower courts and upheld by appellate courts of nearly every state in the union.

Nobody is paid what he is worth, of course, but a lot of us are paid more.
